business ideas students: College Entrepreneurs Nick Howard, 2019-12-23 When it comes to college, we all know it is extremely expensive. With the limited scholarship and grant opportunities, students are required to take out all kinds of loans. With the loans and other expenses piling up over four years, financial stress becomes a major issue for college students. The logical answer to help curve this stress is to go out and get a job, but it can certainly be very difficult for a college student to get a job. Work study jobs are far and few between and are very competitive. Part time jobs can also be very difficult to come by. One major issue is the fact that many students go away to college, therefore many employers do not want to hire someone who can only work during breaks or only work during the semester when they are in their college town. Part time jobs also can create scheduling conflicts because college students need time to go to class, study, and participate in their extracurricular activities. Limited availability is also a major strike against a college student when it comes to getting a job. Between these job market struggles and the student debt continually growing, this can cause massive amounts of stress for college students. A great remedy to this dilemma is entrepreneurship. Being an entrepreneur allows students to maintain a flexible schedule while still earning money for their education. This book contains business ideas that are ideal for college students. I hope these ideas inspire students to become college entrepreneurs!
