Overview of "The Family Business"

"The Family Business" is an American television series that premiered on the Urban Movie Channel in November 2018. Based on the novel series by Carl Weber, the show revolves around the Duncans, a prominent family in the New Orleans area that runs an exotic car business. However, their business is a front for a significant involvement in the underworld and organized crime. As the Duncans navigate their dual lives, viewers are drawn into a world filled with drama, betrayal, and the complexities of familial loyalty.

The show is unique in its portrayal of African American families in the context of crime dramas, highlighting the cultural nuances of New Orleans. The rich backdrop of the city, combined with the show's focus on family dynamics and ethical dilemmas, sets it apart from other series in the genre. The series showcases how family ties can both support and complicate the lives of its characters, making it relatable to viewers who understand the importance of family. The lead characters include the patriarch, L.C. Duncan, his wife, and their children, each of whom brings their own challenges and storylines to the forefront.
