Understanding Bright Dead Things Poems

Bright dead things poems are a distinctive subset of poetry that juxtaposes the concepts of brightness—symbolizing life, illumination, and hope—with death, decay, and loss. This contrast creates a powerful tension that invites readers to reflect on the transient nature of existence. These poems often navigate the space between despair and beauty, allowing a nuanced exploration of emotions tied to mortality.

Definition and Characteristics

At their core, bright dead things poems combine vibrant imagery with themes of death or endings. The “bright” element usually refers to light, clarity, or moments of epiphany, while “dead things” evoke mortality, stillness, or the remnants of life. This duality is central to the genre, as it captures the coexistence of opposing forces within the human condition.

Historical Context

While the specific term “bright dead things poems” is contemporary, the interplay of light and death has been a recurring theme throughout poetic history. From Romantic poets who meditated on mortality to modernists who embraced ambiguity, the tension between brightness and death has evolved into a rich tradition that informs current poetic practices.

Thematic Elements in Bright Dead Things Poems

Themes in bright dead things poems are multifaceted, often blending existential inquiry with vivid sensory details. These poems commonly address the fragility of life, the persistence of memory, and the search for meaning amid impermanence.

Mortality and Transience

One of the dominant themes is mortality—the inevitable end that all living beings face. Bright dead things poems do not shy away from death; instead, they illuminate it, revealing how death can coexist with moments of brilliance or insight. This theme encourages readers to consider the fleeting nature of existence and the value found within ephemeral experiences.

Memory and Remembrance

Bright dead things poems often serve as acts of remembrance, preserving the essence of what has passed. Through evocative language and imagery, these poems keep memories alive, transforming what is dead into something enduring and radiant.

Light as Metaphor

Light functions as a powerful metaphor in these poems, symbolizing hope, knowledge, and transformation. The brightness contrasts with death not only visually but thematically, suggesting that even in endings, there can be illumination and renewal.

Notable Poets and Examples

Several contemporary poets have contributed significantly to the corpus of bright dead things poems, using their unique voices to deepen the exploration of its themes. Their works exemplify the genre's emotional depth and artistic innovation.

Eve Ewing's Contribution

Eve Ewing is a prominent poet whose collection titled "Bright Dead Things" has drawn critical acclaim. Her poems intricately weave personal and communal grief with moments of resilience and light, offering a profound meditation on loss and survival.

Other Influential Poets

Beyond Ewing, poets such as Ada Limón, Tracy K. Smith, and Ocean Vuong incorporate elements resonant with bright dead things poetry. Their works frequently address death and memory with luminous language and imagery.

Representative Poems

- "Bright Dead Things" by Eve Ewing – a collection exploring themes of trauma and hope.
- "The Carrying" by Ada Limón – reflecting on mortality and the human experience.
- "Life on Mars" by Tracy K. Smith – interweaving cosmic imagery with personal loss.
- "Night Sky with Exit Wounds" by Ocean Vuong – blending memory and survival.

Techniques and Styles Used

Bright dead things poems employ a range of poetic techniques to evoke their characteristic contrasts and emotional resonance. These methods enhance the thematic depth and accessibility of the poems.

Imagery and Symbolism

Poets use vivid and often contrasting imagery to highlight the tension between life and death. Symbols such as light, shadows, decay, and renewal are common, serving as metaphors for broader existential questions.

Juxtaposition and Paradox

The juxtaposition of brightness and death creates paradoxes that challenge traditional perceptions of these concepts. This technique pushes readers to reconsider assumptions about endings, suggesting they can be simultaneously dark and illuminating.

Form and Structure

While bright dead things poems vary widely in form, many utilize free verse to mirror the fluidity of life and death. Some poems employ repetition, fragmentation, or shifting perspectives to convey instability and transformation.

Cultural and Literary Significance

Bright dead things poems hold a significant place in contemporary poetry due to their ability to articulate complex emotional and philosophical ideas in accessible ways. They resonate across cultures and experiences, offering solace and insight.

Reflection of Contemporary Issues

These poems often reflect societal concerns such as grief from violence, loss due to illness, or the collective trauma of historical events. By framing these issues through the lens of brightness and death, poets provide new ways to process and understand pain.

Influence on Modern Poetry

The rise of bright dead things poems has influenced broader poetic trends, encouraging more nuanced explorations of difficult themes. This genre has inspired poets to embrace vulnerability and complexity, enriching the literary landscape.

Appeal to Diverse Audiences

The universal themes and evocative style of bright dead things poems attract a diverse readership. Their mixture of hope and sorrow speaks to readers from various backgrounds, making them relevant and impactful in multiple contexts.

- Exploration of mortality offers catharsis and understanding.
- Use of vivid imagery enhances emotional engagement.
- Juxtaposition challenges conventional narratives about death.

- Relevance to contemporary social and personal issues heightens significance.

1. Bright Dead Things: Poems by Ada Limón

This collection of poems explores themes of vulnerability, resilience, and the beauty found in everyday life. Ada Limón's work is known for its emotional depth and accessible language, drawing readers into intimate reflections on nature, identity, and love. The poems often balance darkness with light, capturing moments of both despair and hope.

2. Night Sky with Exit Wounds by Ocean Vuong

Ocean Vuong's debut poetry collection is a poignant exploration of identity, family, and trauma. The poems weave together personal history and broader cultural narratives, using vivid imagery and lyrical language. Like "Bright Dead Things," Vuong's work delves into the complexities of human emotion with a tender yet unflinching voice.

3. The Carrying by Ada Limón

Another powerful collection by Ada Limón, "The Carrying" continues to delve into themes of survival and connection. The poems reflect on the physical and emotional burdens we bear, offering moments of grace and insight. Limón's voice is both intimate and universal, making this a compelling companion to "Bright Dead Things."

4. Citizen: An American Lyric by Claudia Rankine

This innovative work blends poetry, prose, and visual art to address issues of race, identity, and social justice. Claudia Rankine's "Citizen" challenges readers to confront the realities of systemic racism in contemporary society. The book's stark and evocative style complements the introspective tone found in Limón's poetry.

5. Don't Call Us Dead by Danez Smith

Danez Smith's poetry collection confronts themes of mortality, race, and queerness with urgency and lyrical power. The poems are raw and provocative, inviting readers to engage with difficult truths through a deeply personal lens. 6. Wild Iris by Louise Glück

Winner of the Pulitzer Prize, "Wild Iris" is a contemplative and evocative collection that explores themes of nature, mortality, and renewal. Louise Glück's precise language and profound insights offer a meditative reading experience. Her exploration of life and death resonates with the contemplative spirit of Limón's poetry.

7. Where the Sidewalk Ends by Shel Silverstein

A beloved classic of children's poetry, this book combines whimsy and wisdom in playful verses. While lighter in tone, Shel Silverstein's poems celebrate imagination and the complexities of childhood. The book's embrace of both joy and melancholy makes it an interesting contrast to the more somber themes in "Bright Dead Things."

8. Life on Mars by Tracy K. Smith

This Pulitzer Prize-winning collection blends cosmic imagery with reflections on grief, science, and human connection. Tracy K. Smith's poems are both expansive and intimate, exploring the intersections of the personal and the universal. The book's exploration of loss and wonder aligns with the emotional depth found in Limón's work.

9. American Sonnets for My Past and Future Assassin by Terrance Hayes

Terrance Hayes reinvents the sonnet form to address themes of race, identity, and American history. His collection is innovative, challenging traditional poetic structures while engaging with contemporary social issues. The intensity and inventiveness of Hayes's poetry offer a dynamic complement to the themes in "Bright Dead Things."

bright dead things poems: Bright Dead Things Ada Limón, 2019-02-07 'Bright Dead Things buoyed me in this dismal year. I'm thankful for this collection, for its wisdom and generosity, for its insistence on holding tight to beauty even as we face disintegration and destruction.' Celeste Ng, author of Everything I Never Told You A book of bravado and introspection, of feminist swagger and harrowing loss, Bright Dead Things considers how we build our identities out of place and human contact - tracing in intimate detail the ways the speaker's sense of self both shifts and perseveres as she moves from New York City to rural Kentucky, loses a dear parent, ages past the capriciousness of youth and falls in love. In these extraordinary poems Ada Limón's heart becomes a 'huge beating genius machine' striving to embrace and understand the fullness of the present moment. 'I am beautiful. I am full of love. I am dying,' the poet writes. Building on the legacies of forebears such as Frank O'Hara, Sharon Olds and Mark Doty, Limón's work is consistently generous, accessible, and 'effortlessly lyrical' (New York Times) - though every observed moment feels complexly thought, felt and lived.

bright dead things poems: The Hurting Kind Ada Limón, 2022-05-10 An astonishing collection about interconnectedness—between the human and nonhuman, ancestors and ourselves—from National Book Critics Circle Award winner and National Book Award finalist Ada Limón. "I have always been too sensitive, a weeper / from a long line of weepers," writes Limón. "I am the hurting kind." What does it mean to be the hurting kind? To be sensitive not only to the world's pain and joys, but to the meanings that bend in the scrim between the natural world and the human world? To divine the relationships between us all? To perceive ourselves in other beings—and to know that those beings are resolutely their own, that they "do not / care to be seen as symbols"? With Limón's remarkable ability to trace thought, The Hurting Kind explores those questions—incorporating others' stories and ways of knowing, making surprising turns, and always reaching a place of startling insight. These poems slip through the seasons, teeming with horses and kingfishers and the gleaming eyes of fish. And they honor parents, stepparents, and grandparents: the sacrifices made, the separate lives lived, the tendernesses extended to a hurting child; the abundance, in retrospect, of having two families. Along the way, we glimpse loss. There are flashes of the pandemic, ghosts whose presence manifests in unexpected memories and the mysterious behavior of pets left behind. But The Hurting Kind is filled, above all, with connection and the delight of being in the world. "Slippery and waddle thieving my tomatoes still / green in the morning's shade," writes Limón of a groundhog in her garden, "she is doing what she can to survive."

bright dead things poems: Sharks in the Rivers Ada Limón, 2010 The speaker in this extraordinary collection finds herself multiply dislocated: from her childhood in California, from her family's roots in Mexico, from a dying parent, from her prior self. The world is always in motion--both toward and away from us--and it is also full of risk: from sharks unexpectedly lurking beneath estuarial rivers to the dangers of New York City, where, as Limón reminds us, even rats find themselves trapped by the garbage cans they've crawled into. In such a world, how should one proceed? Throughout Sharks in the Rivers, Limón suggests that we must cleave to the world as it keep[s] opening before us, for, if we pay attention, we can be one with its complex, ephemeral, and beautiful strangeness. Loss is perpetual, and each person's mouth is the same / mouth as everyone's, all trying to say the same thing. For Limón, it's the saying--individual and collective -- that transforms each of us into a wound overcome by wonder, that allows the wind itself to be our own wild whisper.

bright dead things poems: You Are Here Ada Limón, 2025-04-08 Published in association with the Library of Congress and edited by the twenty-fourth Poet Laureate of the United States, a singular collection of poems reflecting on our relationship to the natural world by fifty of our most celebrated contemporary writers. In recent years, our poetic landscape has evolved in profound and exciting ways. So has our planet. Edited and introduced by the twenty-fourth Poet Laureate of the United States, Ada Limón, this book challenges what we think we know about “nature poetry,” illuminating the myriad ways our landscapes—both literal and literary—are changing. You Are Here features fifty previously unpublished poems from some of the nation’s most accomplished poets, including Joy Harjo, Diane Seuss, Rigoberto González, Jericho Brown, Aimee Nezhukumatathil, Paul Tran, and more. Each poem engages with its author’s local landscape—be it the breathtaking variety of flora in a national park, or a lone tree flowering persistently by a bus stop—offering an intimate model of how we relate to the world around us and a beautifully diverse range of voices from across the United States. Joyful and provocative, wondrous and urgent, this singular collection of poems offers a lyrical reimagining of what “nature” and “poetry” are today, inviting readers to experience both anew.

bright dead things poems: The Carrying Ada Limón, 2019-02-07 WINNER OF THE NATIONAL BOOK CRITICS CIRCLE AWARD FOR POETRY 2019 Ada Limón is a poet of ecstatic revelation . . . a book of deep wisdom and urgent vulnerability' Tracy K. Smith, Guardian 'Vulnerable, tender, acute . . . The Carrying is a gift' Natasha Trethewey, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and former US Poet Laureate 'Exquisite poems' Roxane Gay From National Book Critics Circle Award Winner Ada Limón comes The Carrying - her most powerful collection yet. Vulnerable, tender, acute, these are serious poems, brave poems, exploring with honesty the ambiguous moment between the rapture of youth and the grace of acceptance. A daughter tends to aging parents. A woman struggles with infertility - 'What if, instead of carrying / a child, I am supposed to carry grief?' - and a body seized by pain and vertigo as well as ecstasy. A nation convulses: 'Every song of this country / has an unsung third stanza, something brutal.' And still Limón shows us, as ever, the persistence of hunger, love, and joy, the dizzying fullness of our too-short lives. 'Fine then, / I'll take it,' she writes. 'I'll take it all.' The Carrying leads us deeper towards the hard-won truth of what it means to live in an imperfect world.

bright dead things poems: Celebrating Poetry Across the K-12 Curriculum Napoli, Mary, Day, Deanna, Ward, Barbara A., 2025-07-16 Poetry provides opportunities to explore the universal and common experiences that connect us as human beings. When teachers infuse poetry into their classroom, it can foster compassion, develop interdisciplinary connections, and support literacy instruction. However, not all teachers use poetry in their classroom either because they are not aware of the value of poetry or because they have not had positive experiences with poetry. Given the importance of sharing poetry with today’s youth, educators must feel confident in evaluating well-written poetry and how to weave poetry from award-winning poets to support interdisciplinary connections. Celebrating Poetry Across the K-12 Curriculum aims to ensure that poetry for children is not neglected as part of the curriculum, and to help educators feel more confident in their understanding of children’s poetry, its relevance to children’s lives, and its importance to supporting pedagogical connections. Featuring interviews with well-known poets, this resource also showcases the latest pedagogical and scholarly research supporting the integration of poetry in the K-12 classroom. Covering topics such as science content, romanticism, and diversity recognition, this book is an excellent resource for educators, classroom teachers, literacy specialists, librarians, professionals, researchers, scholar, academicians, and more.

bright dead things poems: Historical Dictionary of U.S. Latino Literature Francisco A. Lomeli, Donaldo W. Urioste, María Joaquina Villaseñor, 2016-12-27 U.S. Latino Literature is defined as Latino literature within the United States that embraces the heterogeneous inter-groupings of Latinos. For too long U.S. Latino literature has not been thought of as an integral part of the overall shared American literary landscape, but that is slowly changing. This dictionary aims to rectify some of those misconceptions by proving that Latinos do fundamentally express American issues, concerns and perspectives with a flair in linguistic cadences, familial themes, distinct world views, and cross-cultural voices. The Historical Dictionary of U.S. Latino Literature contains a chronology, an introduction, and an extensive bibliography. The dictionary section has cross-referenced entries on U.S. Latino/a authors, and terms relevant to the nature of U.S. Latino literature in order to illustrate and corroborate its foundational bearings within the overall American literary experience. This book is an excellent access point for students, researchers, and anyone wanting to know more about this subject.

bright dead things poems: Nature's Writers Donald S. Clark, 2024-09-03 A photographic celebration of the landscapes that have influenced some of America's most important nature writers—from John Muir to Terry Tempest Williams to Barbara Kingsolver. Since 2019, Donald S. Clark has documented the places that have been instrumental in influencing the lives and words of both historic and contemporary nature and environmental writers throughout the United States. While we have always felt their passionate connection to their own environments, no book has ever made this visual connection between writers and their land before—the relationship between prose and place. Featuring more than 40 of America's most important writers, the content is as far-reaching as America itself: from sea to shining sea, forest to prairie, and mountain to coastline. Accompanying each gallery of stunning photography is a selected excerpt by the writer about their land. With the increasingly noticeable effects of climate change, the significance of these writers—and their personal connections to the environment—is even more timely. This unique and compelling story of the land and how it has inspired some of our greatest poets and authors will make a wonderful gift for budding environmentalists, students of nature writing, or anyone interested in conservation.

bright dead things poems: First in the Family Jessica Hoppe, 2024-09-10 An unflinching and intimate memoir of recovery by Jessica Hoppe, Latinx writer, advocate, and creator of NuevaYorka. "A powerful thunderclap of a memoir." —Lilliam Rivera, author of Dealing in Dreams A MOST ANTICIPATED BOOK OF 2024: Today.com, LupitaReads, Electric Literature, Esquire, Publishers Weekly In this deeply moving and lyrical memoir, Hoppe shares an intimate, courageous account of what it means to truly interrupt cycles of harm. For readers of The Recovering by Leslie Jamison, Somebody's Daughter by Ashley C. Ford, and Heavy by Kiese Laymon. During the first year of quarantine, drug overdoses spiked, the highest ever recorded. And Hoppe's cousin was one of them. "I never learned the true history of substance use disorder in my family," Hoppe writes. "People just disappeared." At the time of her cousin's death, she'd been in recovery for nearly four years, but she hadn't told anyone. In First in the Family, Hoppe shares her journey, the first in her family to do so, and takes the reader on a remarkable investigation of her family's history, the American Dream, and the erasure of BIPOC from recovery institutions and narratives, leaving the reader with an urgent message of hope.

bright dead things poems: Startlement Ada Limón, 2025-09-30 "Startlement is a book of rare treasures. With lyrical mastery and intimate storytelling, Limón's poetry reveals new ways of paying attention. This powerful collection is a gift."—Amy Tan An essential collection spanning nearly twenty years of emphatic, fearlessly original poetry from one of America's most celebrated living writers. Drawing from six previously published books—including widely acclaimed collections The Hurting Kind, The Carrying, and Bright Dead Things—as well as vibrant new work, Startlement exalts the mysterious. With a tender curiosity, Ada Limón wades into potent unknowns—the strangeness of our brief human lives, the ever-changing nature of the universe—and emerges each time with new revelations about our place in the world. Both a lush overview of her work and a powerful narrative of a poet's life, this curation embodies Limón's capacity for "deep attention," her "power to open us up to the wonder and awe that the world still inspires" (The New York Times). From the chaos of youthful desire, to the waxing of love and loss, to the precarity of our environment, to the stars and beyond, Limón's poetry bears witness to the arc of all we know with patient lyricism and humble wonder. "A poet of ecstatic revelation" (Tracy K. Smith), Limón encourages us to meet our shared futures with open and hungry hearts, assuring "What we are becoming, we are / becoming together."

bright dead things poems: Girl with Death Mask Jennifer Givhan, 2018-03-17 The prize-winning poet "crafts a clear-eyed narrative of Latina womanhood in this lovely collection ripe with longing, hope, and broken faith" (Publishers Weekly). Winner of the Pleiades Editors' Prize and Miller Williams Poetry Prize, poet Jennifer Givhan now explores the path from girlhood to womanhood through love, tequila, sex, first periods, late nights, abuse, and heartache. She describes a journey brimming with transformative magic that heals even as it shatters. In four rich movements of poems, Givhan profiles the suffering and the love of a Latina girl who enters motherhood while coming to terms with sexual trauma. Her daughter is a touchstone of healing as she seeks to unravel her own emotions and protect the next generation of women. Givhan uses changing poetic forms to expose what it means to mature in a female body swirling with tenderness, violence, and potential in an uncertain world.

bright dead things poems: Teach This Poem, Volume I Madeleine Fuchs Holzer, The Academy of American Poets, 2024-06-26 Instill a love of poetry in your classroom with the illuminating and inviting lessons from Teach This Poem classroom activities. Co-published with the Academy of American Poets, the leading champion of poets and poetry in the US, this book is an accessible entry-point to teaching poetry and fostering a poetic sensibility in the classroom. Each lesson follows a consistent format, with a warm-up activity to introduce the chosen poem, pair-shares, whole class synthesis, related resources, oral readings, and extension activities. Curated by the AAP, the poems are chosen with an eye toward fostering compassion and representing diverse experiences. bright dead things poems: The Gift of Animals Alison Hawthorne Deming, 2025-04-01 This unique collection of poems from diverse contemporary voices offers a range of perspectives on humans' complex relationship with animals, celebrating and bearing witness to the lives of animals both wild and domestic. Animals have long been a source of inspiration, sustenance, and companionship, and poems about and for animals are among the oldest traditions across human cultures. This collection of contemporary poems adds to this ancient lineage, celebrating animals for their beauty and intelligence; empathizing over their suffering; and hoping for their future, which is entwined with our own. The presence of an animal is a gift. The loss of an animal is a grief. To share such feelings through poetry is to create a community of caring for the creatures that accompany us on Earth. The Gift of Animals includes poems by some of today's most beloved poets, including Ellen Bass, Lucille Clifton, Michael Collier, Toi Derricotte, Rita Dove, Camille Dungy, Mark Doty, Nick Flynn, Jorie Graham, Joy Harjo, Terrance Hayes, Arthur Sze, Yusef Komunyakaa, Ada Limón, Aimee Nezhukumatathil, Craig Santos Perez, Paisley Rekdal, and more.

bright dead things poems: I Know Your Kind William Brewer, 2017-09-12 "An eye-opening and haunting journey into the opioid epidemic ravaging West Virginia—the constantly-chased highs . . . the devastating overdoses." —Bustle Selected for the National Poetry Series by Ada Limón, I Know Your Kind is a haunting, blistering debut collection about the American opioid epidemic and poverty in rural Appalachia. In West Virginia, fatal overdoses on opioids have spiked to three times the national average. In these poems, William Brewer demonstrates an immersive, devastating empathy for both the lost and the bereaved, the enabled and the enabler, the addict who knocks late at night and the brother who closes the door. Underneath and among this multiplicity of voices runs the Appalachian landscape—a location, like the experience of drug addiction itself, of stark contrasts: beauty and ruin, nature and industry, love and despair. Uncanny, heartbreaking, and often surreal, I Know Your Kind is an unforgettable elegy for the people and places that have been lost to opioids. "His vivid poems tell the story of the opioid epidemic from different voices and depict the sense of bewilderment people find themselves in as addiction creeps into their lives." —PBS NewsHour "There's these incredibly dreamy, mythic images . . . of people stumbling, of people hoping, of people losing each other. I love this book because it brought us into such empathy and compassion and tenderness towards this suffering." —NPR "America's poet laureate of the opioid crisis . . . Brewer sums up this new world." —New York Magazine "May be one of this year's most important books of verse since its brutal music confronts the taboos of addiction while simultaneously offering hope for overcoming them." —Plume bright dead things poems: Other Musics Cynthia Cruz, 2019-04-25 Latina poets occupy an important place in today's literary landscape. Coming from diverse backgrounds, they share an understanding of what it means to exist within the margins of society. As artists, they possess a dedication to their craft and a commitment to experimentation. Their voices—sometimes lyrical, sometimes autobiographical, sometimes politically charged—are distinctly female. Whereas previous anthologies have merged the works of Latino and Latina poets, this collection is the first to showcase Latina poetry on its own terms. For years readers have admired the poetry of prominent Latina authors Cherrie Moraga, Ana Castillo, and Sandra Cisneros. Building on their inspirational legacy, Other Musics heralds a new generation of Latina poets whose work blends traditional forms and styles with postmodern innovations. These poets do not fit neatly into one category. They come from all walks of life, from remarkably varied class, ethnic, occupational, and educational backgrounds. Their topics and concerns are wide-ranging. All of the poets, according to volume editor Cynthia Cruz, are creating "a new kind of music," one that embraces the "in-between" and bicultural world that Latina women must constantly straddle. The fifteen poets featured in this anthology are Desirée Alvarez, Karen Bradway, Xochiquetzal Candelaria, Diana Maria Delgado, Natalie Diaz, Carolina Ebeid, Sandy Florian, Carrie Fountain, Leticia Hernández-Linares, Ada Limón, Sheryl Luna, Kristin Naca, Deborah Paredez, Emmy Pérez, and Carmen Giménez Smith. Along with an ample selection of each of their poetry, Other Musics features an artist statement by each poet, in which she discusses her work, her writing practice, how she became a writer, and her views on the purpose and mission

bright dead things poems: Resistance, Rebellion, Life Amit Majmudar, 2017-05-23 Poets on the march: 50 crucial poems written in response to the current political climate, selected and introduced by the Ohio Poet Laureate—and son of immigrants—Amit Majmudar. In a political atmosphere where language and even meaning itself are continually under threat, poetry has a critical role to play. And our poets have been responding—in the streets and at their desks, demanding a full accounting from themselves and from their nation. Majmudar's elegant introduction to these vital poems reminds us that false stories take a lot of killing because they are made of language. Because they are made of language, though, they can be killed. From Solmaz Sharif and Eileen Myles to Kevin Young and Juan Felipe Herrera, American poets of diverse styles and strategies have contributed their truths: scenes from the front lines of resistance, and from the interior of our collective conscience. A final cento by Majmudar—a poem including at least one line or phrase from each of the poems in the volume—celebrates the robust multiplicity of voices in this book and in America now.
